

CALL FOR PAPERS: „ETNOGRAFIA. PRAKTYKI, TEORIE, DOŚWIADCZENIA” (8/2022)

The 8th issue of our journal will focus on psychological anthropology, a subdiscipline of cultural anthropology that looks into interactions linking cultural phenomena with human psychological processes. Psychological anthropologists are interested in the problem of universalism and particularism of human behavior – both individual and institutionalized within societies and cultures.

We invite you to submit research papers (in Polish and English) on issues at the intersection of cultural anthropology and psychology in the context of ethnographic research. We are interested in theoretical and practical dimensions involved in the translation of psychological concepts into broadly understood ethnographic methods of inquiry into human realities. The papers may address classical and contemporary topics of psychological anthropology (i.e., cognition, perception, memory, motivation, emotions, aggression, human development, sexuality, mental health, religion, socialization, acculturation, etc.). The key question we wish to answer is: how do psychological concepts translate into ethnographic practice?
