

2016 Report Network of Anthropology of Religion

The network of anthropology of religion, officially created by Simon Coleman and Ramon Sarro in the Biennial EASA conference of 2006 at Bristol, UK, has celebrated its healthy first decade of existence and continues to be sharing information about conferences, events, and publications through its very active list-serve, which includes between 350-400 members and is much appreciated by scholars within and beyond Europe. Over the last years, several members of the network have involved in one way or another in Religion and Society: Advances in Research, a yearly publication co-directed by Ruy Blanes, Simon Coleman and Sondra Hausner, indirectly linked to the EASA network of anthropology of religion.
<http://journals.berghahnbooks.com/religion-and-society>